Constant Reference to Papers.

Newspapers as partners of the profits of the liquor business received much attention. After the report turned to the discussion of other matters, there was constant reference to the papers as the allies of the traffic. It the sale on and its allies, the wet newspapers, want local option, as they claim, the report continues, the logical solutions is to restrict the sale of liquor to those places which have decided to license it. "If Richmond chooses to license it, "The massive it is the report of Treasurer S. B. Jones showed that the league owes $1,569.11, and has a balance of $114.25 on hand. Staunton was vouched for by Professor C. T. Jordan. He attributed the dry victory there to the special interposition of Providence. The local option lew of the State, he asserted, is the most imperfect on the statute books of the State, because it gives every judge the chance to construe the law for himself in his own jurisdiction. In Staunton, Professor Jordan said, the liquor men brought in 114 of their own voters and tried to overthrow the election by saying they had voted illegally. Some of these were indicted for illegal voting through the efforts of the drys. One, a negro, was given one minute in jail. Then a Democratic tiovernor pardoned him so that he could vote again.

"Was it Mann?" asked a delegate.

"No." replied the speaker.

"Is it one who wants to be Scnator? incurred another.

"Well," said Professor Jordan. "I don't know any Governor who wouldn't like to be Senator."

He read statistics to show the decrease in arrests and convictions in Police Court. But, he said, the maximum of good will not be realized until the saloon is driven from the State.

"Well," said Professor Jordan. "I know I am treading on dangerous ground, but I say to you that three are three men whose word has been so potent that had it been spoken at any time within the past five or six years the people could have had the right to vote on prohibition.

Professor Jordan confessed that ballots had gone through his fingers to sustain these three men, but said he had asked forgiveness, and promised that le wend not knowingly commit so givenous a sin again.

Ten cents, little ton that any of them were led for me," Mr. Lorimer declared. The tax question does not trouble the committee, it says. Although it might be necessary with the loss of salcon fleense to be prudent with appropriations for the first year, it does not think there would be a permanent increase in the rate of taxation. At all events, a protest was entered against putting any such provise in the referendum.

There followed many statistics and argument as to the effects of prohibition in dry States and cities. The report favored catechizing candidates for the Legislature on the subject of a State-wide election, and candidates for the United States Senate on the Milier-Curtis bill regulating interstate shipments of liquor.

This is the merest outline of the report, which was most voluminous.

Mr. Whitehead urged the election of officers who will enforce the laws. Laymen, he said, should go to work creating public sentiment. Appeal was made to citizens to do their duty when called upon to serve on grand juries. Many delegates asked Mr. Whitehead legal questions, such as the duties of legal questions, such as the duties of prosecuting attorneys, of magistrates and judges; the position of one who orders liquor for another, and the of fense of soliciting orders for liquor in dry territory.
